Who we are and what we do

The British Institute of Energy Economics aims to encourage the study of energy economics and energy policy by bringing together individuals with a wide range of energy expertise and encouraging the exchange of ideas and information. Membership fees support a programme of meetings, conferences/workshops and publications. The BIEE was established as a company limited by guarantee in 1980, becoming a registered charity in 1985, and is governed by its Council of voluntary officers elected by the members.

Our members

Membership is open to all with an interest in energy economics and energy policy. BIEE's membership is drawn from a wide variety of people with interest in energy issues, including universities, government, international agencies, regulatory bodies, industry and the financial sector. The BIEE is also committed to its student members and offers them discounts and travel assistance.

An international perspective

The BIEE is the UK affiliate of the IAEE, the International Association for Energy Economics, an organization with over 3000 members and a growing international network of other national presences. The IAEE is famous for its international, North American and European Conferences as well as the Energy Journal, its publication of research papers on energy economics. IAEE membership can be added to the standard BIEE membership.

A unique organisation

With a history spanning more than 25 years, BIEE has established itself as a unique link between academia, the industry and policy makers in the discipline of energy economics. BIEE conferences are nationally and internationally renowned for the excellence of the papers presented and its meetings for the quality of speakers and fertile discussions. The BIEE offers its members valuable and unique networking opportunities. By pursuing its aim, the BIEE hopes to contribute in the development of UK energy infrastructure and energy policy.

At a time where energy markets are gaining in complexity, the BIEE is more committed than ever to leverage its network to serve education, study, research, discussion and dialogue in energy economics.

Why become a member?

- To support BIEE's aims to further the understanding of energy economics and the dialogue required to develop a crucial element of modern society – that of the provision of secure, affordable and acceptable energy to meet peoples' needs.
- Participation in conferences and meetings that are truly informative.
- Access to a valuable and unique network in academia, the industry and public sector.
- Facilitate reduced price membership of the IAEE, including the subscription to the Energy Journal and the IAEE newsletter.
- Discounted access to BIEE conferences and workshops, with additional financial support for student members.
- The BIEE network has proved effective for students (and others) job-hunting.
